

Call for Proposals: PhD Day AIAr 2025 at CREF!

On October 2, 2025, the first PhD Day of the Italian Association of Archaeometry (AIAr) will be held in Rome at the Enrico Fermi Research Center (CREF).

It will be a full day dedicated to the research of PhD students involved in science applied cultural heritage: a valuable opportunity to exchange ideas, connect, and network in the heart of Rome.

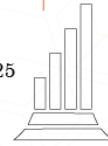

Objectives of the PhD Day:

- Promote exchange and dialogue among PhD students working in archaeometry and science for cultural heritage.
- Build a network of young researchers to support their professional and scientific development.
- Give visibility to ongoing PhD projects, highlighting their innovation and impact.

Main Topics:

We welcome contributions on a wide range of topics related to archaeometry and science for cultural heritage, particularly:

- New methods and technologies for diagnostics and characterization.
- Archaeological and historical studies with an archaeometric approach, including dating and provenance studies, Bioarchaeology, Forensic Archaeology, Remote Sensing, and Digital Twins.
- Preventive conservation, restoration, and conservation science, with a focus on environmental monitoring, effects of climate and microclimate on preservation, and innovative methods and materials.
- Innovative approaches to data manipulation: including data management, database creation, artificial intelligence and machine learning, data sharing, and data fairness.
- Valorisation and dissemination of cultural heritage.

How to Participate: Submit Your Proposal!

The event is entirely sponsored by AIAr with no additional costs for participants, and we encourage all PhD students to present their work. Different types of presentations are planned:

- Talk
- Poster
- Flash Communication: 3-minute presentations dedicated to selected posters, offering an additional opportunity for discussion

Deadlines:

July 1, 2025 – Registration opening

July 20, 2025 – Abstract submission deadline

September 1, 2025 – Notification of abstract acceptance

September 14, 2025 – Final registration deadline

October 2, 2025 – PhD Day AIAr
